

Hemp “Caregiver” Program

Native Prairie is excited to launch a new program to supply hemp users with the products they need. The hemp “Caregiver” program will allow consumers to purchase hemp biomass directly from the Native Prairie Research Farm on a per plant basis. The biomass can then be used by the consumer to make their own products for consumption. Consumers can consult with Native Prairie representatives to select genetics that best serve their needs.

Consumers can buy plants for the 2021 harvest at $285 per plant, and up to 6 plants are available per consumer. We estimate that the market price of a plant is around $750 (assuming 3/4 lb. of biomass per plant), giving consumers a large cost savings compared to purchasing retail products.

Plants for the 2022 harvest can be prepaid for at $125 each with the remaining balance due at harvest.

All agronomic data on plants purchased will be available to the consumer through the VISPS Verification Program. This is a program and online system that allows all aspects of the growing process to be tracked, and will soon allow growers the potential to capture carbon credits.
